Allan Davis loved Lucila Cinrk, who was a nagger. He saw evidence of her temper displayed upon her father. But he loved her, and that was enough. He married her.

I know this is not a pleasant story, and readers need go no further unless they are interested in a curious psychological fact. I myself am a believer in heredity. I am sure that somewhere in the past this woman had an ancestor with a sharp tongue, which she had never tried to bridle. If there is sympathy for the man who inherits a consuming thirst for drink, why not for the woman who has had bequenthed to her a bad temper, which she took with her hair and eves?

Luella had everything to make her happy, from the standpoint of any reasonable being being being, but she never ceased complaining, and at last the good nature and fortitude of her husband deserted him, and he turned, not as the worm turns but rather like a raging lion, and Luella style of dressing. But the afternoons held her peace in sheer astonishment.
"I wish you were dumb," he said in a of concentrated wrath and scorn "I wish I might never hear the sound of your voice again."

Like all evenly balanced natures, when e overstepped boundaries, he went too far, but there was this in extenuationhis words came from the lips and not is dangerous often even to those acfrom the heart, they sounded far worse thing for any girl again as long as I | than they intentioned, and they recoiled on himself even before he had seized his hat to leave the house. The end came at night, when Luella watched with her husband alone. He had been sleeping and dreamed some thing that awakened him with a wild start and made all things look unreal-all except his wife, who bent over him with a new solicitude in her face. He saw it and was grateful.

[Special Correspondence.] NEW YORK, July 24.—Some folks like Long Branch and some folks do not. I am one of the latter class, but, fortunately for Long Branch, I fancy, my likes or dislikes would have little influence one way or another. But I will have my say anyhow. Those who go in for a gay, sporty time may find it at the botels and those who have fine teams enjoy the rides. But somehow the whole at mosphere of Long Branch has some.

The bathing counted good swimmers, and-and-the hack drivers are about the coolest scamps it was ever my lot to meet. They take all you've got and, like Oliver Twist, want more to carry you only as far as Pleasure Bay.

Yet there are good women and noble men who have their summer homes at Long Branch, and Elberon is so near, and there is generally too stiff a breeze for mosquitoes, so life is worth living there if you are rich.

Every afternoon the ladies gather on the pier waiting for their "men folks" their prettiest. I saw one very striking costume which would attract attention anywhere. The Misses Bell Complexion and Hair Specialists.

The brilliant complexions of women in the more exclusive circles of New York society are not explained by the theory that associates beauty and idleness. In fact, many leaders of the world of fashion are hard workers. Yet they keep their good looks even when they are old. How do they manage it? THE MISSES BELL, of 78 Fifth Avenue, New York, themselves connected with some of the most noted and honored families in the metropolis, have answered the question. They have prepared for the use of women in general, five preparations for improving the complexion and the hair.

Five Toilet Treasures.

The Misses BELL'S

While it may be impossible to corral the "boundless universe," it is pretty certain that the coming exposition will help amazingly in placing the products of American fields and factories, of American brains and brawn, into every nook and corner of this planet we call earth. The purpose of the enterprise is admirably defined in its title-the National Export Exposition For the Advancement of American Manufactures and the Extension of Export Teade. This it aims to accomplish by means of three main departments,

First,-A complete display of every line of American manufactured products which is al-teady in demand abroad or for which a foreign auther may be created. Second—A complete exhibit of samples of manufactured goods made in other countries than the United States and now successfully sold in all foreign markets or prepared in those markets for Third.-A department for the instruction of the American manufacturer in packing and label-ing his products to meet the requirements and approval of foreign buyers. The exposition, which will be the first of its character ever held in this country, is the outgrowth and development of the Philadelphia Commercial museum and is under the joint aussices of this institution and the Franklin institute. It will be opened on Sept. 14 and continue in progress ten weeks, closing on Nov. 30.

This will be the first general exposition held in the east since the Centention held in the east since the Centen-nial in Philadelphia in 1876, and this able to talk with his father without fact gives it an added interest to peopic living in the seaboard states. unique and varied attractions, netable among which will be the daily concerts held in the handsome auditorium. The exposition grounds are admirably situated on the west bank of the Schuylkill river and comprise a tract of land 56 acres in extent, deeded to the Philadelphia museum by the city of Philadelphia. The place is within ten minutes' ride of the city hall and is easily accessible from all parts of the city both by electric and steam railroad lines. A station of the Pennsylvania railroad, at which all trains will stop during the exposition, is located within 400 feet of the main entrance. The work of construction is well advanced on the buildings and will be ready for the installation of exhibits by the middle of August. The main group of buildings is so arranged as to form one grand and imposing structure about 400 by 100 feet in extreme dimensions and covering an area of more than nine acres. Five separate buildings enter into this great edifice. which is constructed largely of steel and brick and upon lines which the experience of other expositions has proved to be desirable. These main ouildings and several special buildings will give an exhibition space of 200,000 square feet.

Three of the five buildings comprising the main structure are permanent. They are each two stories high, 380 feet long and 90 feet wide. These handsome and substantial structures will become the permanent home of the Philadelphia Commercial museum. SAMUEL HUBBARD.
